“Inanimate objects, do you have a soul
Which sticks to our soul and forces it to love?”

Alphonse de LAMARTINE (1790 – 1869)

Continuation of an artistic exploration launched in Los Angeles in 2019 then at the Abbey of Valmagne, France, in September 2021, the exhibition «Sobre la Resistencia II» links historical periods and highlights the eternal strength of artistic creation.

Manolo MESA appropriates ceramic material in painting. As an unconscious heritage, ceramic is the link between civilizations, a way to tell our story today.

From an object of everyday life to the need to enhance these traditional practices by making them sacred through painting, Manolo MESA forcefully interprets the role and independence of the artist.

Through the painter's creative act, the figured objects abandon any idea of function to become transfigured matter: the receptacle for the souls of women and men, who imagined, then conceived them; loved and then passed them on.

The works of the Spanish artist are an invitation to revamp our imaginations linked to objects, a call to understand and feel differently.
To go and see beyond the doors of accepted perception.

There, where inanimate objects have a soul.

MANOLO MESA (1989)

El Puerto de Santa María, Cadix, Espagne

«I make an allegory to that spiritual world that I need to feel close to. I like to talk about people, to relate people to nature, to work on the look, time, sequence, duality of things. All topics as resistance ideology.»

BIOGRAPHY

A graduate of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of Seville, the painter Manolo MESA builds an artistic action without limit, in the studio or the public space, constantly pushing his field of investigation further.

From his first creations in 2010 to his study of ceramics today, the Spanish artist paintings call upon aesthetic contemplation while questioning the links between past and future, tradition and innovation, abandonment and resistance.

Manolo MESA's artworks highlight the need to value tradition and appropriate its codes to transform them into contemporary expression, participating in consciousness and collective culture evolution.

The cultural peculiarities strength of resistance to globalization and his devotion to know-how are fueling his passion. He observes and seeks to understand particular contexts to convey unique and timeless sensations through painting: establishing a bridge between the memory of the past environment and our present.
